A Drunken Indian Assaults Two White Ladies.

On Tuesday evening about 5 o'clock, two of the most estimable ladies of Carson started upon a neighborly errand, up the lane which runs alongside the track of the V. & T. R. R., for Nevers' Ranch; and when about half way between the round house and the place of their destination they were suddenly confronted by an Indian who was evidently under the influence of intoxicating liquor, but who was yet sober enough to know better than to do as he did, and who when the ladies were about passing him seized one of them rudely by the shoulders. Of course the lady thus assaulted became greatly alarmed, but luckily for her, her companion exhibited more courage and presence of mind, and she vigorously attacked the Indian, not forgetting, meantime, to join her friend in crying lustily for help. His wim reception and the outcries of alarm frightened the second, and he left them; and they, bent upon securing his punishment and prosecuting their own errand, returned to the Round House where they met ex-Constable Sam Hodgkinson who, with another man, bore them company up the lane for a considerable distance, until it becoming time for Hodgkinson to return to his duties, he did the best he could do under the circumstances and lent one of the ladies his pistol, and they pursued their way to Nevers' house. On inquiry there, they learned that an Indian such as they described had been there; and these valiant ladies, accompanied by our friend Jim Griffith started out in the direction of Bath's place to search for Mr. Indian, and sure enough they came in sight of him, and she of the pistol let drive at him but probably with no desirable effect, for the rascal made tremendous time skeddaddling toward Bath's and was soon lost to sight.

Now this is a pretty serious matter in many respects. First it illustrates the very positive dangers arising from the selling of liquors to Indians; and secondly it warns our lady friends of all ages and conditions that it is not a safe thing for them to go, unprotected by male friends or without arms in the hands of resolute ones of their own number, out into the unprotected byways and trails which are often resorted to for pleasure walks by our townfolk. Uniformly the Washoes are a notable harmless and inoffensive people; but the sort of whiskey which is sold to them is enough to make a howling savage of a cultivated and non-combatant white man; and the wonder is that with the frequent recurring drunks observable among the Indians here lately they have not perpetrated more outrages outside of their own people than have been brought to notice. The cruelty of the bucks to their squaws and children when they are drunk is something dreadful; and a hard working squaw that makes herself useful about some of our townspeople's kitchens told a pitiful story, a day or two since, of the slow dying of her little boy from the effects of a beating inflicted upon him by a drunken Indian. We trust that measures may be taken to watch and trap those persons, Chinese or others, who are suspected of dealing out "fire water" to the Indians hereabout.

THERE is but little to repay the enterprising tourist for his peripatations and inquiries about that usually prolific field of items, the railway station. The regular large trains of box-cars with their great loads of merchandise; the many "flats" laden with lumber and coal; the construction trains with their freightage of Coolies, these are the commonplace incidents of a monotonous routine of daily events; and there is naught else to break the suggestive quiet where rolls the Treadway creek and hears the feeble gurgling of its own meanderings; and the mention of this prevailing quietude, these tame and usual incidents constitute their own excuse when we say that the noteworthy thing which justifies their mention is the conspicuous and long needed enterprise of a pea-nut stand which is erecting on the mint lot corner, fronting the railway track. We have long suffered a vague consciousness, that there was something wanting to make that neighborhood assume metropolitan proportions. The thing needed was a pea-nut and root beer stand; and there it is at last.

MR. WILLIAM PATTERSON, our esteemed and faithful County Attorney, is a very worthy citizen, and all that; but if he were a saint in glory, which he is not, by a long shot, or if he were an Aneroid barometer, which we hope he is too modest to pretend to be, he couldn't possibly be justified in coming out in the middle of March, as he did yesterday, with a brown linen coat on, deliberately, and against the protest of every well meaning, law abiding citizen, crowding the season. There are some things which even a long life of honest dealing and an habitual rectitude of demeanor cannot palliate—and this is one of them. He might with equal propriety appear at the head of a Fourth of July procession arrayed in salmon colored blanket overcoat.

THE GOVERNOR left town last night—went to California we believe.

THE INNS OF COURT were deserted yesterday. The chamber where Judge Hillyer maintains the majestic sovereignty of the Republic was as empty and forlorn as an abandoned band-box; and the hall where the Honorable Harris champions the cause of Astraea was as desolate as an obsolete sepulchre. As to the place where Mr. Justice Witherell sits in judgment upon the smaller class of civil and the meaner grade of criminal litigants, there sat his Honor, calm and resigned and too dignified to appear impatient of the depressed state of the law market. And in the great Court of last resort not a sound save the dreary echoes of the visitor's footfall was heard. This sleepy season in the haunts of Justice reminds one of that corresponding period of drowsiness in the realms of outward Nature when "not a leaf stirred."

Our neighbor, Rail, is still adding to his already extended facilities for supplying this market with big and little things in the hardware line as well as in the matter of crockery and tinware; and while his large stock of goods is constantly replenishing, he is clearing the decks for action and broadening his boundaries. In plainer parlance, he has caused the walks in front of his store to be cleared of much old iron and things and is building a new entrance to his tinkering department—of all of which we are reminded by his new advertisement.

JOHN WAGNER, who left town for the Great and gloomy East last night, has received information and proof in the shape of surprisingly rich horn silver specimens, of having struck it in his claims at Ruby Hill. He says there is a great body of the sort of ore of which he showed us a chunk—unmistakably charged with chlorides. We should be one of many who would be glad to see John return hither from the fabled East bringing with him a larger beer wagon stacked full of twenty-dollar pieces.

OUT AGAIN.—We noticed Mr. McGovern taking an airing in a buggy yesterday—looking considerably the paler for his long and serious sickness but still seeming a very decided improvement on the ghostly role which his anxious friends were prepared to see him assume. This sort of weather ought soon to make a man of him again. We are glad to see him doing so well.

SEVERAL of the jurors who found our hook Foster guilty of murder in the first degree, have signed a statement to the effect that they wouldn't have pronounced him guilty but for the belief that their recommendation to mercy would have saved him from hanging. This statement has been sent to General Dix and Dix says he will give it serious consideration.
